Our High-Tech God

Reflection by Deb Garvey

I was walking through the Mall of America, where I never go, returning something I didn't need. Not because I didn't need it, but because it didn't fit. I'd ordered it online but returning in-store would save me a few bucks. Thus, my pilgrimage.

I dreaded going, but once inside the mall I was sucked in, just like that! The action. The energy. The stuff I never realized I wanted. And very cool directional kiosks. My mind was shifting: It's too bad I have an appointment to get to. I'd like more time to explore this place.

“Our high-tech God is very clever. He is always with me.”

- Deb Garvey

Then, as I was making my way through Sears Court, I heard the voice of God. Well, actually, it was the voice of Pastor Paul. I looked around. His voice was getting louder. He was preaching! Did I mention this was a Sunday?

I paused. Assessed the situation. And realized the voice was coming from my phone. I'd inadvertently launched a sermon podcast. I was sharing it with the crowd, though no one seemed to be listening. I quickly silenced my phone, but God had already grabbed my attention. Again, my mind shifted: Our high-tech God is very clever. He is always with me. And he offers a pretty good directional kiosk.
